

Alex Schildt

Alex Schildt has spent more than 15 years in human capital management and recruitment, building deep expertise in talent acquisition across complex and high-demand sectors. Over the past five years, he has applied that expertise to the national security community through his leadership at ClearanceJobs, first as Head of Sales and now as President, where he oversees efforts to strengthen the cleared workforce pipeline for defense, intelligence, and government partners. His focus includes solving mission-critical hiring challenges, advancing technology-driven talent solutions, and ensuring organizations can access the trusted professionals required for operational success.

Throughout his career, Alex has built and led high-performing recruitment, sales, and strategy teams, developing approaches that enhance workforce readiness and elevate talent as a foundational national security capability. He remains committed to advancing the people, technology, and processes that power America's security missions.